

Alternative Grant & Fellowship Opportunities

GENERAL	2
DEVELOPING COUNTRIES	5
JOURNALISTS	12
SPECIFIC PROFESSIONS	15
WOMEN	21

This collection of grant and fellowship opportunities is organized according to selection criteria. The first section, “General” contains opportunities that accept a wide range of applicants. The second section, “Developing Countries”, contains opportunities that are limited to candidates coming from developing countries, as well as some opportunities that are located in those countries. The third section includes only opportunities for Journalists, and the fourth section, “Specific Professions” is an assortment of opportunities that requires specific expertise. The final section lists opportunities available only to female applicants.

Many, but not all, of these opportunities require strong English skills. They generally require applicants to submit a body of work and curriculum vitae, and they all have application materials available online, with hyperlinks at the end of each opportunity’s description. Please contact the organizations directly with any questions. The Scholar Rescue Fund cannot provide any more information regarding these opportunities than is already listed. Good luck!

BOND UNIVERSITY SCHOLARSHIPS

Bond University in the Gold Coast of Australia offers significant global scholarships available to highly qualified international students. Preference for these scholarships goes to applicants who perhaps may not be able to study at a tertiary level without substantial financial assistance.

For more information on these opportunities please visit the Bond University scholarships website at: <http://www.bond.edu.au/study/scholarships/>

BRITISH CHEVENING SCHOLARSHIPS

These scholarships, funded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and administered by the British Council, are prestigious awards, which enable overseas students to study in the United Kingdom. Scholarships are offered in over 150 countries and enable talented graduates and young professionals to become familiar with the UK and gain skills, which will benefit their countries.

What are the selection criteria for application? A typical successful applicant would be:

- A graduate with proven academic skills.
- Committed to return to their country and contribute to the socio-economic development of their country through *implementing the new skills and knowledge acquired in the UK.
- Established in a career, with a track record of excellence and achievement, and the prospect of becoming a leader in his/her chosen field. The vast majority of Chevening scholars are aged 25 - 35 years old.
- Be able to show at interview that they possess the personal qualities to benefit from their scholarship and use it to succeed in their chosen career.
- Have a clear idea how their scholarship will benefit their country on their return.
- Have good English Language skills, as most UK Higher Education Institutions require a minimum IELTS of 6.5 for admission onto Postgraduate courses.

ROTARY INTERNATIONAL AMBASSADORIAL SCHOLARSHIPS

Ambassadorial Scholarships, The Rotary Foundation's oldest and best-known program, was founded in 1947. Since then, nearly 38,000 men and women from about 100 nations have studied abroad under its auspices. Today it is the world's largest privately funded international scholarships program. Nearly 800 scholarships were awarded for study in 2005-06. Through grants totaling approximately US$500 million, recipients from about 70 countries studied in more than 70 nations.

"The Rotary Foundation does some terrific things, not the least of which is the Ambassadorial Scholarships program." — Michael R. Whiteman, international programs director, University of Idaho

The purpose of the Ambassadorial Scholarships program is to further international understanding and friendly relations among people of different countries and geographical areas. The program sponsors several types of scholarships for undergraduate and graduate students as well as for qualified professionals pursuing vocational studies. While abroad, scholars serve as goodwill ambassadors to the host country and give presentations about their homelands to Rotary clubs and other groups. Upon returning home, scholars share with Rotarians and others the experiences that led to a greater understanding of their host country.

Generous contributions from Rotarians worldwide represent a continued faith that today's Ambassadorial Scholars will be tomorrow's community and world leaders.

IIE IRAQ SCHOLARS AND LEADERS PROGRAM

The Iraq Scholars and Leaders Program (ISLP) is a competitive scholarship program which provides select graduate (Master's or Doctoral) and current or prospective undergraduate students from Iraq with a fully-funded scholarship towards the completion of a degree at a college or university in the United States in one of the following fields of study: business, economics, education administration, engineering, geology, geophysics, law, public policy or public health (preference will be given to candidates pursuing study in business, engineering and geosciences). There is a strong preference for the geosciences.

Funded by a U.S. Corporation and administered by the Institute of International Education (IIE), the goal of the program is to provide the Iraqi scholarship recipients with the opportunity to pursue study at a U.S. college or university, develop new leadership and cultural skills, and to build closer ties between the people of the U.S. and the future leaders of Iraq.

HUMAN RIGHTS ADVOCATES PROGRAM (HRAP), COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

HRAP is designed to prepare proven human rights leaders from the Global South and marginalized communities in the U.S. to participate in national and international policy debates on globalization by building their skills, knowledge, and contacts. The Program features a four-month residency at Columbia University in New York City with a structured curriculum of advocacy, networking, skills-building, and academic coursework.

Participants are selected on the basis of their previous work experience on human rights, commitment to the human rights field, and demonstrated ability to complete graduate-level studies. Advocates must originate from and reside in either the Global South or the United States. Fluency in English is required. Advocates must secure institutional endorsement from their organizations for their participation in the Program and must commit to returning to that organization upon completion of the Program. If accepted, they must also commit to participating in the program fully.

Completed applications are due by December 31, 2009. Incomplete applications will not be considered. The 2010 HRAP will take place from late August to the middle of December 2010.

FORD FOUNDATION INTERNATIONAL FELLOWSHIPS PROGRAM (IFP)

The Ford Foundation International Fellowships Program provides support for up to three years of formal graduate-level study leading to a masters or doctoral degree. Fellows are selected from countries and territories in Asia, Africa, the Middle East, Latin America, and Russia, where the Ford Foundation maintains active overseas programs. U.S. nationals are not eligible, although Fellows may study in the United States.

Fellows are chosen on the basis of their leadership potential and commitment to community or national service, as well as for academic excellence. Fellows may enroll in masters or doctoral programs and may pursue any academic discipline or field of study that is consistent with the interests and goals of the Ford Foundation.

Because local requirements vary widely among IFP countries, applicants should carefully follow the specific application guidelines provided by the relevant IFP International Partner organizations, including deadlines for the submission of applications. JOURNALISTS

ALFRED FRIENDLY PRESS FELLOWSHIPS

The Alfred Friendly Press Fellowships (AFPF) is an American non-profit, non-governmental organization that gives developing-world journalists the opportunity to work as reporters at American newspapers. The fellowships are awarded to young and mid-career print and online journalists from developing world countries with an emerging free press. Reporting and writing give them a practical introduction to the professional and ethical standards of the U.S. print media.

The 10 successful applicants will spend six months reporting for a U.S. news organization and will learn U.S. journalistic traditions that they may adapt and apply in their home countries. To be eligible, applicants should be from the developing world and be between the ages of 25-35, work full-time as a journalist, have three years of journalism experience in print or online media, and have an excellent command of English (all activities are conducted in English).

EDWARD R. MURROW JOURNALISM FELLOWS PROGRAM

The U.S. government and six universities are cooperating on a new program that will bring 100 journalists from around the world to the country for study and training. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice announced the launch of the Edward R. Murrow Journalism Fellows Program on December 13. The fellows will train for three weeks in April at their respective host universities, which will develop special curricula for the journalists. According to the organizers, the journalists will travel to Washington, D.C. at the beginning of April for a short orientation and a chance to meet government officials. They will then break into six groups and travel to one of the participating universities.

At the university, they will attend specialized seminars, interact with American students, and learn about local government through visits to state capitals and small communities. The program concludes back in Washington with an international journalism symposium.

The program is a cooperative effort of the State Department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, the Colorado-based Aspen Institute, and the universities of Kentucky, Minnesota, North Carolina (Chapel Hill), Oklahoma, Southern California and Texas (Austin).

Journalists interested in the program should contact their country's U.S. embassy. For a complete list of links to U.S. embassies around the world, visit <http://usembassy.state.gov/>.

SEAPA FELLOWS PROGRAM

The Southeast Asian Press Alliance (SEAPA) is sponsoring a SEAPA Fellows Program in Southeast Asian Journalism which will bring mid-career journalists from Asian countries together for the purpose of pursuing in-depth investigative reporting projects and increasing interaction among media professionals in the region.

It has generally been the case that prestigious fellowship programs have taken journalists from Asia to Western institutions for fellowships like the Nieman program at Harvard and the Knight fellowships at Stanford University. While these programs are doubtless excellent, as the free press matures and grows in Asia, SEAPA, which is an alliance of press advocacy organizations, wishes to encourage journalists to pursue a fellowship program within the region.

Applicants should have some experience writing about social, economic and political issues. Although reports may be produced in the fellow's language, proficiency in spoken English is required.

HUMAN RIGHTS WATCH / HELLMAN-HAMMETT GRANTS

Human Rights Watch administers the Hellman/Hammett grant program for writers all around the world who have been victims of political persecution and are in financial need.

Since the program began in 1990, more than 400 writers have received grants including several group grants to writers in Bosnia, Burma, Peru, and Sierra Leone. Even so, the recipients are a tiny portion of the many writers around the world whose books have been banned or who have been exiled, imprisoned, tortured, and harassed because of their work.

LEDIG HOUSE INTERNATIONAL WRITERS RESIDENCY

Ledig House International Writers Residency is located approximately two and a half hours north of New York City in the town of Omi, in the scenic Hudson River Valley. Writers and translators from all fields are encouraged to apply for a residence lasting anywhere from one week to two months. Up to 20 writers per session--10 at a given time--live and write on the stunning 300 acre grounds and sculpture park that overlooks the Catskill Mountains.

Ledig House provides all meals, and each night a cook prepares dinner. Days are reserved as quiet hours, while evenings afford a more communal environment. During each session, several guests from the New York publishing community are invited for dinner and discussion. Bicycles, a swimming pool and nearby tennis court are available for use.

Created in 1992, Ledig House International Writers Residency is named after the German publisher Heinrich Maria Ledig-Rowohlt. Ledig had a reputation as a man with an unerring sense of literary quality. His publishing list included prominent writers from around the world--Thomas Wolfe, William Faulkner, Yukio Mishima, Jean Paul Sartre, Vladimir Nabokov, John Updike, Toni Morrison, Albert Camus, and Thomas Pynchon, to name only a few.

WOODROW WILSON INTERNATIONAL CENTER FOR SCHOLARS - PUBLIC POLICY SCHOLARS

The center awards approximately 20-25 residential fellowships annually to individuals with outstanding project proposals in a broad range of the social sciences and humanities on national and/or international issues. Topics should intersect with questions of public policy or provide the historical and/or cultural framework to illumine policy issues of contemporary importance. While the Center does not engage in formulating actual policy, it is particularly interested in those projects that help provide the essential background against which current issues can be more thoroughly understood

Applications from any country are welcome. Men and women with outstanding capabilities and experience from a wide variety of backgrounds (including government, the corporate world, and the professions, as well as academia) are eligible for appointment. For academic participants, eligibility is limited to the postdoctoral level.

THE LEAKEY FOUNDATION - FRANKLIN MOSHER BALDWIN MEMORIAL FELLOWSHIPS

The Franklin Mosher Baldwin Fellowships, established in 1977, reflect the Foundation's efforts to usher in a new era in African paleoanthropology.

The Baldwin program is based on a realistic assessment of needs and priorities. Africa possesses such extraordinary resources in the field of prehistory--rich fossil and archaeological sites that are unparalleled--that the stewardship and careful use of these assets is a task of international importance. By enabling bright young scholars to obtain graduate education, the Leakey Foundation is helping to equip these individuals to assume a leadership role in the future of paleoanthropology. Since 1978, more than 70 Baldwin Fellowships have been awarded. Recipients include young men and women from the following countries: Ethiopia, Eritrea, Kenya, Malawi, Nigeria, Somalia, South Africa, Sudan, Tanzania, Togo, Uganda, Zimbabwe, Zambia and the Republic of Congo. This fellowship is intended for scholars with citizenship in an African country who seek to obtain an advanced degree or specialized training in an area of study related to human origins research. This award is for a program of approved special training and/or advanced training towards an MA, PhD, or equivalent and is limited to two years of support.

THE HEGG HOFFET FUND FOR DISPLACED WOMEN GRADUATES

The Hegg Hoffet Fund for Displaced Women Graduates deals with applications for assistance from graduate women (in special cases tertiary women students) who have been displaced as a result of war, political upheaval or other serious emergencies, and makes short term grants for refresher courses for re-entry into the candidates' professional fields, and courses for integration into new countries. In case of serious natural disasters, national federations and associations may apply for short-term grants on behalf of university women (women students), who suffered hardship due to the disaster, and who wish to continue their work or studies.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF UNIVERSITY WOMEN

The International Federation of University Women (IFUW) is an international, non-profit organization of women graduates. We were founded in 1919 by women who believed in the importance of working together for peace, international understanding and friendship. Our members are women of all ages, cultures, disciplines and professions. Many of them are experts and leaders in their fields. Through IFUW, women graduates form an international network, bringing an interdisciplinary approach to global problems.
