Incoming Chairman, Scholar Rescue Fund
President and Chairman, Institute of International Education

The Institute of International Education has been rescuing scholars since 1919. In the 1930s, the illustrious American broadcast journalist Edward R. Murrow, then IIE’s Assistant Director, led IIE’s successful effort to save hundreds of European scholars from Nazi persecution.

Regrettably, our efforts waned after the Second World War because we lacked a permanent fund and the permanent resolve to address the blight on civilization known as academic repression. Thanks to the vision and generosity of the Scholar Rescue Fund founders, for the past ten years we have been back in full operation, saving the lives and careers of many hundreds of academics and their families.

Sadly, scholar rescue is a growth industry. With Henry Jarecki as our Chairman Emeritus, and with the continuing support of our wonderful donors and friends, I shall endeavor to lead the Scholar Rescue Fund to expand and continue to raise the level of our performance, with one essential goal: to provide support and safe haven to the finest scholars, whenever and wherever they are in trouble.

I am honored and humbled to be asked to fill the very big shoes of the Scholar Rescue Fund Founding Chairman Henry Jarecki. I promise that I will do my best to make him and all of you proud.

Mark A. Angelson

Scholars around the world are threatened with violence, imprisonment, surveillance, censorship, and even death as a result of their academic status and work. Since our founding in 1919, the Institute of International Education (IIE) has worked to protect students and scholars in danger.

Ten years ago, IIE established the Scholar Rescue Fund with seed funding from several IIE Trustees, the Ford Foundation, and George Soros' Open Society Institute. That year, the Scholar Rescue Fund awarded fellowships to 14 scholars from 11 countries across Asia, Africa, the Middle East and South America. These scholars were persecuted for reasons including ethnic, religious and political issues, as well as for the content of their teaching and research. The Scholar Rescue Fund also established its fellowship principles: the program would respond to the most senior, most threatened scholars in the world from any country and any field and provide them with a one-year fellowship – renewable for up to one additional year – of up to $20,000. The Scholar Rescue Fund would also find a host university, anywhere safe in the world, to match the fellowship and welcome the scholar into their academic community, so that he or she could continue without interruption to write, think, conduct research, and teach.

Since those early days, the Scholar Rescue Fund has reviewed more than 4,000 inquiries from 102 countries. Due to the diligent and dedicated work of the Selection Committee, 900 full applications from 66 countries have been considered during 55 Selection Committee meetings. Cumulatively, over 697 fellowship grants to 457 scholars from 48 countries have been awarded. The Scholar Rescue Fund has arranged for scholar placement at more than 270 host institutions in 40 countries and has developed a network of 550 safe havens at universities and colleges in 45 countries that have committed to protecting academic freedom.

In 2007, the Scholar Rescue Fund launched the Iraq Scholar Rescue Project with support from both the private and public sectors, in response to the large scale emergency threatening the intellectual capital of Iraq. The United States Government and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation were two of the most instrumental partners in establishing the Iraq Scholar Rescue Project. The project has rescued over 250 threatened scholars – an effort of historic proportion that brings to mind some of IIE's most dramatic endeavors. The Institute and the Scholar Rescue Fund remain devoted to the development of Iraq's academic future and have committed to re-building higher education in Iraq by conducting ground-breaking conferences in Amman and Erbil on best practices in higher education.

The 10-year anniversary is an occasion to reflect on what we have accomplished over the past decade. Most importantly, it is an opportunity to thank all of those who have made this possible. Foremost among the leaders to thank is the Scholar Rescue Fund’s Founding Chairman, Dr. Henry G. Jarecki. After 10 years of service, Dr. Jarecki will become Chairman Emeritus and turn over his duties as Chairman to the very able IIE Treasurer and Trustee Mark A. Angelson. We welcome Mark and thank him for stepping into this very important role. We also thank the many donors, funders, and friends who have made our work at IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund possible. Thanks to all of you, there will always be a place to which threatened scholars can turn for support and safe haven in times of crisis.

Reflections
Chairman
Scholar Rescue Fund 2002-2012

“We bring threatened scholars to host universities around the world so that they can once more think, teach, and publish what they want and what the world needs to hear.”
– Dr. Henry G. Jarecki, IIE Vice-Chair and Scholar Rescue Fund Founding Chairman

2012 marks the 10th Anniversary of the Institute of International Education’s Scholar Rescue Fund. Since 2002, the program has saved the lives and work of nearly 500 threatened scholars by providing them with fellowships at hundreds of safe host universities outside of their home country.

Why is the Scholar Rescue Fund’s work so important?
I come back to a fact that has characterized my entire life. It can be summed up in just one sentence: We need dissidents.

Our scholars are highly accomplished senior academics from every discipline. Up to now they have come from over 48 countries. Their lives, health, and freedom have been threatened as a result of their academic work.

They do the things that scholars do every day: they think, they read and write, they teach students, they undertake research, and they live an everyday life. For this, they and their families experience a shocking panoply of abuse: harassment, isolation, interrogation, assault, torture, imprisonment, death.

Why does this happen? I could name many different reasons: anti-intellectualism; a fear they will reveal secrets about corruption or inconvenient truths; the fact that they are admired by the public and provide an example of not kowtowing to power; or an unsatisfactory ethnicity or language.

But one reason stands out in each story: they just won’t shut up.

Even more than dissidents, our scholars are forces of nature. Dylan Thomas described such a drive as, “the force that through the green fuse drives the flower.” This force leaves them with no inner choice but to speak out about the issues that inform their lives and work – even when they know full well that this puts them and their loved ones in very real danger.

Whether the topic is drug trafficking in Colombia, polling results in Belarus, public health in Myanmar, or abuses of law in innumerable places – these forces of nature must tell the truth and tell it loud.

It is precisely this courage that moves me. It means that we who are cowards – and I am among them – must support all who are brave.

We have learned a lot about all this since IIE was founded in 1919. We learned from the dissidents and victims who fled the Bolshevik Revolution, Hitler’s Europe, the Hungarian Uprising, apartheid-ridden South Africa, the Iranian revolution, and Tiananmen Square. Each of them produced a flood of professors who needed sanctuary and to whom we gave help.

Ten years ago, we decided to formalize this task by forming the Scholar Rescue Fund. And then the war in Iraq made it happen all over again.

Many years ago, Germany. Five years ago, Iraq. Today, Syria.

Time continues to tick away and we have done what we could do to stop the clock of nightmare for our scholars. If we have done our job right, the courageous few of this world’s scholars will always have a Scholar Rescue Fund to turn to as a haven.

This fact, more than anything, is what gives me such level of hope as I have.

There is something else that gives me hope. It is all of you.

I would like to express my tremendous gratitude to all of you who have made this happen over the past 10 years. I thank my friends and family, the hard-working members of our staff and selection committee, our founders, our host university partners, and the leadership of IIE.

I thank my fellow Trustee Mark A. Angelson, who takes over from me as Chairman of IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund in 2013.

I also thank and admire our scholars, who have gone through hell to educate us.

Even without powerful historical reminders, it is clear that what we are doing with the Scholar Rescue Fund is important. We must keep rescuing scholars, advancing scholarship, and, most important of all, supporting dissidents. Perhaps we even hope to change the world a little by doing so.

In the broadest sense, we believe that the Scholar Rescue Fund will foster open societies and progress. This movement to freedom, along with the names and faces of nearly 500 scholars and counting, will be our greatest legacy.

Henry G. Jarecki, Founding Chairman, IIE Scholar Rescue Fund, with a Scholar Rescue Fund scholar from the Democratic Republic of the Congo.
History of Rescue
From the 1920s to the Present

The Scholar Rescue Fund forms part of the Institute of International Education’s longstanding legacy of responding when academics and students are threatened in the face of crisis. For over 90 years – from the Bolshevik Revolution and the rise of Nazi Germany to the Hungarian Uprising and apartheid in South Africa – IIE has brought threatened students and scholars out of danger and to safety around the world. Beginning in the 1920s, as Stalinism gripped the Soviet states, the Russian Student Fund helped more than 600 students and scholars find welcoming universities in Europe and the United States. In the 1930s, IIE was instrumental in founding the Emergency Committee in Aid of Displaced Foreign Scholars, which rescued more than 330 scholars from persecution in Europe. After periods of assistance to Hungarian, Asian, and South African students and scholars, IIE helped thousands devastated by the Third Balkan War in the 1990s. With the establishment of the Scholar Rescue Fund in 2002, IIE formalized this vital work of protecting scholars and scholarship. In the past 10 years, more than 450 scholars have found protection at nearly 300 host partner institutions around the world.

“We will not walk in fear, one of another. We will not be driven by fear into an age of unreason if we dig deep in our history and doctrine and remember that we are not descended from fearful men, not from men who feared to write, to speak, to associate, and to defend causes which were for the moment unpopular…”

– Edward R. Murrow, Renowned American Journalist and IIE Assistant Director from 1932-1935

Reports gathered in 2010 from 152 Iraqi fellows found that they have, together, while on fellowship:

10,000
Taught over 10,000 Iraqi students, including 4,000 via distance learning

4,000

500
Published more than 500 articles or books

100
Participated in over 100 scientific research projects

25
Presented more than 25 papers at academic conferences around the world

A survey in 2011 of 184 alumni found that:

79%
of alumni are currently affiliated and engaged in academic work in either a university or college

When asked about current work:

71%
of scholars responded that they are involved in research

51%
of scholars are teaching or training

40%
of scholars are currently writing and publishing

69%
of scholars published between one and five peer-reviewed academic journal articles since the completion of the Scholar Rescue Fund Fellowship

38%
of alumni reported teaching between 60 and 200 students per year

Scholar Stories

“The Scholar Rescue Fund extended a generous offer that enabled me to resume my academic work in major American universities. There I met some of the best professors in the academic world, attended many conferences, and was able to write a book and continue my research. At the end of each contract, the Scholar Rescue Fund continued to assist me by contacting universities to offer me a position. I am very grateful for the kind help and attention I continue to receive.”

Professor of Comparative Studies and Middle Eastern Studies
Duke University

Hosting Faculty Praise

“I have witnessed an amazing atmosphere created by this scholar in the typically indifferent classroom at this large university. It is as if these students are waking up! They are fascinated by his ability to explain complex concepts. One student said to me, ‘He is really a kind of Renaissance man, he knows so much in so many areas!’”

“We have had many visiting scholars come through our office. Most, if not all, are perfectly delightful colleagues. But [he] is head and shoulders above others.”

“I am impressed by [the scholar’s] devotion to working with the students. They seem to really enjoy the class and the experience of working so closely with a scholar whose knowledge of the issue is so intense and whose personal experience is so dramatic.”

Ten Scholars
Representing the Remarkable Lives and Achievements of Scholar Rescue Fund Scholars in the Last Ten Years

Dr. Shemeem Burney Abbas applied to the Scholar Rescue Fund after Islamic clerics at her university in Pakistan brought charges against her that included blasphemy, an offense punishable by death. Now an associate professor at SUNY Purchase, she is an award-winning author who teaches across disciplinary boundaries, including political science, women’s studies, literature, and creative writing, with a research focus on women’s rituals in Islamic societies.

Dr. Paul Ndebele is a Zimbabwean scholar of psychology with a research focus on bioethics who is currently at the Henry Jackson Foundation in Bethesda, Maryland. Unable to work effectively amid the deteriorating political and economic environment in Zimbabwe, Dr. Ndebele received fellowship support to participate in a bioethics program at the University of KwaZulu-Natal in South Africa.

Dr. Maimul Ahsan Khan is a law professor in Bangladesh with expertise in human rights and Islamic legal issues who refused to remain silent when he observed political interference in his country’s higher education sector. He was one of the Scholar Rescue Fund’s first fellows and spent two years on fellowship at the University of California, Davis.

Professor Mehrangiz Kar is a human rights lawyer and an internationally recognized writer from Iran who advocates for the defense of women’s and human rights throughout the Islamic world. Her work led to her arrest and imprisonment in Iran and ultimately to her exile from her home country. Now a visiting professor at Brown University, she spent her fellowship at Harvard University.

Professor Daniel Coronell, a professor and renowned journalist from Colombia, received death threats for his reports linking Colombian drug traffickers, local self-defense forces, and government officials. His fellowship allowed him to pursue research on the origins of political violence in Colombia at the University of California, Berkeley. Now Senior Vice President and Executive News Director at Univision, he continues to report and research in the United States.
We Salute all our Scholars for their Courage and Commitment to Defending Freedom of Thought and Expression Around the World

Dr. Abbas Fadhil Ali, an accomplished Iraqi scholar in the field of dentistry, applied to the Scholar Rescue Fund after he fled Baghdad with his wife and two daughters. Many of his colleagues had been killed or kidnapped after having received written threats, and he feared for his and his family's lives when he received a similar missive. After two years on fellowship at the University of Sinai in Egypt, he was able to return to Iraq, where he is now Associate Professor in the College of Dentistry at the University of Baghdad.

Dr. Oleg Manaev's long career as a public opinion researcher and professor of social communication in Belarus made him a target of President Alexander Lukashenko's repressive regime. After two years on fellowship at the University of Tennessee, he returned to Belarus to provide “unbiased and objective information to the public” through his teaching and involvement in the Independent Institute of Socio-Economic and Political Studies (IISEPS), which he founded in 1992.

Dr. Martin C. Njoroge, a Kenyan scholar of sociolinguistics, approached the Scholar Rescue Fund for support when violent political protests erupted in Kenya in response to the outcome of the presidential elections. A Scholar Rescue Fund partnership with the University of Pennsylvania allowed Dr. Njoroge to conduct his research in safety until he was able to return to Kenya a year later. He is now Director of the Confucius Institute at Kenyatta University.

Dr. Khalida Al Mousawy, a professor of clinical immunology from Iraq, suffered vicious threats and public attacks from various factions within the University of Baghdad. The fellowship allowed her to spend one year at the University of South Carolina and her renewal year at the King Hussein Cancer Center (KHCC) in Amman, Jordan, where she was able to apply the research methods she learned in the United States to benefit cancer patients in the MENA region.

Dr. Myint Oo is a Burmese physician and health educator whose advocacy for human rights and links to international health organizations subjected him to threats, harassment, and multiple arrests. Through a Scholar Rescue Fund fellowship, he resumed his research and public health advocacy at Tufts University and University College Cork. He recently returned to his home country and has resumed this work with the General Practitioners' Society as Secretary for the Committee of Ethics.

Iraq Scholar Rescue Project

Baghdad Once Reigned as the Intellectual Center of the World

Iraq’s Professoriate Under Attack
In 2006, when security concerns in Iraq reached unprecedented levels, IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund began receiving hundreds of requests for assistance from threatened Iraqi scholars at major higher education institutions across the country. With generous funding from the private and public sectors, most notably, the U.S. Department of State’s Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and the Richard Lounsbery Foundation, the Scholar Rescue Fund responded that year by launching the Iraq Scholar Rescue Project. Since that time, the Iraq Project has provided support for over 250 Iraqi university professors and scientists to resume their teaching and research in safety.

Through temporary academic positions at more than 150 higher education institutions, primarily in the Middle East/North Africa region, fellowship recipients have undertaken groundbreaking research, presented at academic conferences, filed patents, taught thousands of students, and published in some of the world’s leading academic journals. These scholars have also contributed to the growth of their host institutions by training staff and students, and establishing new departments and research laboratories.

Maintaining Links to Iraq through Distance Education
During their fellowships at host institutions around the world, most Scholar Rescue Fund scholars have maintained their academic connections to Iraqi students and colleagues. To broaden these connections, the program established the Iraq Scholar Lecture Series (ISLS), which records academic lectures by Iraqi scholars in the diaspora for distribution and presentation – in DVD format or via live feed – at universities throughout Iraq.

To date, over 125 much-needed lectures in fields such as pediatrics, environmental biotechnology, and molecular genetics have been made available to faculty and students at more than 20 Iraqi public and private universities. Some have been incorporated into official course curricula. University presidents and deans alike have remarked on the impact the program has had by giving its

Additional Fellowship Benefits and Repatriation
In addition to their academic fellowship funding, Iraqi fellowship recipients receive a range of benefits to help them adjust to their host countries and to prepare them for their ongoing work beyond the fellowship term.

Generous donors have made it possible to extend additional grants to Iraqi scholars seeking professional skills training, language training, membership in academic associations, and assistance with publishing costs.

Partnerships with local training programs in the scholars’ host countries have enhanced these benefits by reducing costs and tailoring trainings to the particular needs of Iraqi scholars.

To help address the needs of Iraqi scholars before, during, and after their fellowships, the Scholar Rescue Fund began organizing tailored training workshops in 2009 for Iraqi scholars in Jordan.

In 2011, these workshops expanded into training conferences held in Erbil, the capital of Iraq’s Kurdish region. Bringing together participants from Iraqi universities and education ministries, fellowship recipients, and other international education experts, the conferences cover topics ranging from education quality assurance and accreditation of universities to building institutional linkages and modern teaching methodologies.

Holding academic events in Iraq is reflective of the changing tides of the Iraq Scholar Rescue Project since its inception. While some Iraqi scholars continue to face threats and seek support, others are able to return to their country to contribute to a globally engaged higher education community.

Over 50 returning fellows have either resumed their previous academic positions or taken new posts in Iraq. Amid the country’s changing dynamics, IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund continues to operate a multi-phase program to foster opportunities to preserve and revitalize Iraq’s higher education and scientific sectors.
Fellowship Process
From Application to Placement at a Host University

Call for Applications and Vetting
The Scholar Rescue Fund receives direct applications as well as referrals from universities, human rights organizations and other Scholar Rescue Fund scholars. The staff carefully reviews each request for assistance by conducting security checks and extensive background research on eligible candidates.

Award Selection
Cases are developed and presented to the Scholar Rescue Fund Selection Committee, an independent body of experts, for a financial award decision. Applicants failing to meet the program’s eligibility criteria and those who are not selected for a fellowship are referred to other organizations that may be better positioned to provide the assistance needed.

Partnership with a Host Institution
The Scholar Rescue Fund partners with universities, colleges and research institutions around the world that provide matching financial awards and temporary appointments for the scholars so that they may resume their work in safety. Scholars become integrated into a new academic community, where they may teach courses, guest lecture, conduct original research, and contribute to academic projects already underway at the host institution.

On-Fellowship Support to Scholar and Family
In collaboration with the host institution and other partners, the Scholar Rescue Fund endeavors to ease the transition for scholars and their families in their host country, providing them with direct staff support and resources to help ensure their well-being and development for a successful fellowship and continued work in the future. If more time is needed to identify next steps, scholars may apply for up to one additional year of fellowship support.

Post-Fellowship Support
While the Scholar Rescue Fund’s immediate financial assistance to scholars is finite, its support and relationship with the scholar continues beyond the fellowship period. The program also relies on its alumni to refer colleagues in need of assistance and to make recommendations on how to improve its operations for future scholars.
IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund receives urgent requests from international academic and human rights communities to help threatened scholars around the world. Senior researchers, professors and public intellectuals may apply directly, or fellow academics and human rights organizations may alert the Scholar Rescue Fund to scholars in need. The program responds by assessing each scholar’s credentials and immediate concerns and, after a thorough vetting and selection process, arranges visiting academic positions with safe haven partner institutions of higher learning where each scholar may find respite and safely resume productive academic work. A complete support package includes:

- A grant for living expenses while at the host institution
- Grant-matching financial support from the host institution
- A research or visiting faculty position for up to one year (renewable for a second year)
- Networking and professional development opportunities

Beyond the financial award, IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund offers scholars additional support to help ensure their academic success and personal well-being. Resources are offered by the program directly or otherwise identified within the network of over 6,000 contacts at universities and partner organizations worldwide.

After the Scholar Rescue Fund arranges a scholar’s academic placement at a safe and academically suitable host institution, it facilitates visas and travel arrangements, provides health insurance, offers much-needed encouragement, and makes available specially designated assistance grants to meet additional challenges.

Emergency Assistance, Family Support, and Additional Funds

Generous contributions from numerous sponsors have helped scholars settle into their homes and academic communities. In some cases, the Scholar Rescue Fund helps scholars purchase clothing and household supplies, and covers extra school fees and language training programs for children and spouses. For example, when ethnic violence flared in a former Soviet republic, the program helped a scholar move his three children (ages 2, 5, and 8) to a Red Cross shelter and then assisted in the family’s journey to their host campus in the United States. Support from the Scholar Rescue Fund allowed the scholar to purchase necessary clothing for his family and beds for his children.

Professional Development Grants

The Scholar Rescue Fund is also able to promote scholars’ professional and academic development by providing grants to cover publication expenses, academic association memberships, and journal subscriptions. The program may also help finance registration fees and travel-related expenses for scholars interested in attending and presenting research at academic conferences. The Scholar Rescue Fund may also provide funding for language training, proposal writing, research methodologies, and e-teaching trainings.

Post-Award Support

The Scholar Rescue Fund dedicates financial resources and in-house expertise to assist scholars as they adjust to their new academic environments and prepare for opportunities beyond the fellowship. Together with support networks at host institutions, the program arranges public speaking engagements that serve as valuable networking opportunities for current fellows and alumni while also aiding the scholars’ transitions to new cultures, new climates, and new languages. The Scholar Rescue Fund offers support to scholars applying for other academic positions and fellowships by connecting them to professional organizations, writing letters of recommendation, and advising on application documents, including CVs, cover letters, and research statements. In addition, an in-depth post-fellowship resource guide gives scholars a comprehensive overview of opportunities in the scholars’ academic and related fields.
Impact on Host Campuses
Academic Institutions Around the World Make the Work of the Scholar Rescue Fund Possible

“We are pleased to have a fellow of the Scholar Rescue Fund at our institute. I think this is a win-win situation for both sides involved. It also opens a window of opportunity for the originating countries to strengthen their education and research ties with outside universities and research organisations. With this, the Scholar Rescue Fund is the nucleus for triggered additional activities that multiply the invested funds.”

– Dr. Christoph Schüth, Technische Universität Darmstadt, Institute for Applied Geosciences, Hydrogeology Group, Germany

“We at Harvard SAR are immensely grateful for IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund and for our growing and enduring history of working together to support scholars in need.”

– Jane Unruh, Managing Committee Member, Harvard University Scholars at Risk Program, USA

“IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund makes the abstract commitment many of us have to the idea of academic freedom a daily reality for threatened researchers around the world.”

– Tom Keenan, Director, Human Rights Project, and Associate Professor of Comparative Literature, Bard College, USA

The work of the Scholar Rescue Fund would not be possible without invaluable support from leading academic institutions around the world that provide safe and open spaces for scholars to continue their important academic work. Academic departments, professors, administrators, and students on hundreds of campuses have extended extraordinary professional and personal care to visiting scholars and their families as they adjust to their new communities, rebuild their careers, and regain their sense of well-being. We thank our partners for all they do.

“Hosting a scholar was one of the most meaningful things I have done during my 30 years in international education.”

– Michael Clarke, Executive Director, International Center, Southern Methodist University, USA

“In 2008-2009, the West African Research Center (WARC) in Dakar, Senegal, hosted two Scholar Rescue Fund scholars from the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). Both scholars contributed papers for discussion on panels and successfully managed to make their audience understand what it truly is to be at war and the risks run by families in war-torn countries such as the DRC. Their respective presentations were sobering moments for the young audience that attended the event. Many of the students present vowed to commit to and actively engage in any initiative likely to promote and entrench peace in their respective communities.”

– Professor Ousmane Sene, Director, West African Research Center (WARC), Dakar, Senegal

“Our participation in the Scholar Rescue Fund program has brought our students into contact with a scholar and a perspective that no other format could provide.”

– Susan Carvalho, Associate Provost for International Programs, University of Kentucky, USA

Visiting Lectures

Scholars Share their Experiences Beyond their Host Campuses

The IIE Scholar Rescue Fund Hite Lecture Series offers current Scholar Rescue Fund fellows and alumni the opportunity to engage in public lectures, panel discussions, and course-related seminars on the experiences of threatened scholars and on human rights issues around the world. Made possible by the Hite Foundation Chair for Communications of the Scholar Rescue Fund, the Hite Lecture Series promotes academic freedom, political liberties, and IIE’s commitment to these issues to university and community audiences.

In addition, the Scholar Rescue Fund Hite Award Lectures allow scholars to connect with academics and students outside of their host universities. Recent Hite Lectures have included a sociologist from Côte d’Ivoire speaking at Clark Atlanta University about human rights issues in his home country; a public health specialist from Myanmar presenting at Tufts University and the Institute of International Education in New York on the current health care needs in Myanmar; and a Zimbabwean political scientist discussing human rights and the Scholar Rescue Fund program at the University of Limpopo in South Africa.

About the Scholar Rescue Fund
Founded by the Institute of International Education in 2002, IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund provides academic fellowships and other support for established scholars whose lives and work are threatened in their home countries. These fellowships permit professors, senior researchers and public intellectuals to find temporary refuge at universities, colleges and research centers anywhere in the world, enabling them to pursue their academic work in safety and to continue to share their knowledge with students, colleagues and the community at large. www.scholarrescuefund.org

Institute of International Education
Founded in 1919, the Institute of International Education (IIE) is one of the largest and most experienced not-for-profit organizations in the world dedicated to international education and training. More than 25,000 individuals from 175 countries participate in IIE programs each year. These include the Fulbright Program, which IIE has administered on behalf of the U.S. Department of State since 1946. IIE also provides safe haven to persecuted scholars from around the world through IIE’s Scholar Rescue Fund®. More than 60 Fulbright alumni, IIE alumni, IIE trustees and advisers have won the Nobel Prize. www.iie.org
